

FOREWORD

Publication of the papers in this volume is a joint project of the Program in Aegean Scripts and Prehistory (PASP) of the University of Texas at Austin and the Department of Classical Philology of the University of Skopje in the spirit of the international humanistic aims of Eirene, the Joint Federation of Eastern European Classical Associations. The editors wish to thank many individuals and institutions for their encouragement and support. First, we thank the organizing committee of the XVIIIth Eirene Congress, Prof. Harmatta and his collaborators, especially Dr. Maróth and Prof. Tegyei, for granting us permission to publish the papers of the Mycenological section as a separate volume. All original papers delivered in Budapest appear in much reworked and edited forms.<sup>1</sup> We are grateful to the authors for working so conscientiously within the strict constraints which we established, thereby assuring that this volume could appear in timely fashion.

The Institute for Aegean Prehistory provided the funding necessary for the University of Skopje Press to print this volume. In Austin the graduate assistants working in PASP, particularly Kerri Cox, Bruce Laforse and Suzanne Bonefas, helped with typing, proofing, indexing and even the creation of special fonts. Their work was supported by funds from the Dickson Professorship of the College of Liberal Arts, the MacArthur Foundation, and the Department of Classics.

By working together on editing and producing this volume, we have continued to share in the spirit of the XVIIIth Eirene Congress, a spirit which Petar Ilievski captures in his summary of the work of the Mycenological session which precedes the papers in this volume. At this time then we not only feel the satisfaction of work successfully completed, but the sadness of a fine experience brought to an end. So we look forward all the more eagerly to the circular which will announce the plans for Eirene XIX.
